To whom it may concern

I am a senior in Computer Science and Mathematics at The University of New Mexico. I am applying for the full-time position. More specifically, I am looking for gaining experience in software development.

I started my freshman year as a pure mathematics major. During my second summer, I started learning python from edx.org. I enjoyed programming and decided to switch my major to Computer Science and Mathematics. I find any programming language as a very helpful tool to express one's ideas and thoughts. It is an important thing for anyone to have some skills in programming and see its application in their own field.

Programming helped me to find myself as a very passionate person when it comes to solving puzzles and problems. I enjoy spending my leisure time solving problems in leetcode.com. An hour just passes by as a minute does. My driving energy to get myself up every morning is that there is always a new problem, a new tool or new features to learn.

I would appreciate the opportunity to meet with you to discuss how my passion and qualifications will be beneficial to your company's success.

Thank you,

Sandesh Timilsina
